A HORRIBLE CRIME.

D. I. Corker, of Lafayette, Found Dead in His Bed. Murdered For His Money.

D. I. Corker, of Lafayette, a man well and favorably known to nearly if not all of our readers, was most foully murdered in his bedroom on Monday night, or, more probably, Tuesday morning, last. Corker has been engaged for a number of years in the hardware business at Lafayette. He was an old bachelor and slept in the rear of his store in a small bedroom partitioned off from the rest of the warehouse in the rear division of the building. Below we give a diagram of the building and an explanation thereto:

A, store; BB, bedroom; B, bed; C, warehouse; D, window where murderer entered. The room between the store and warehouse contained a stove, and was used as an office; the bedroom was partitioned off by an eight-foot partition.

The assassin cut the putty from a pane of glass in the rear window, climbed through and probably made a search of the store, as he secured a new ax from a rack in the front of the store. He placed a small table against the partition of the bedroom and on this a chair, and thus clambered over the top of the partition, brushing off the dust and dirt which had accumulated on top. He got down on the other side on top of a large chest which stood just there. It seems likely that Corker, who was very deaf, had only wakened while the murderer was going through the chest where the money was concealed; that making some stir as he woke up the man turned and dealt him a blow with the ax. There was no evidence of a struggle, but the wounds on Corker's arms lead to the belief that he threw up his arms with a view of protecting himself. His arms were cut and broken and his face cut diagonally across one side from the eye to the further end of the chin. Just above the eye there was a fearful gash in the skull. In cutting the mangled parts together it is shown that the sharp edge of the ax had been sent crashing three or four times through the face and skull, and several blows made with the back of the ax. The right shoulder was mangled and broken; the face was literally chopped to pieces; the tongue cut entirely off, and a section of the jaw, with several teeth, was scattered about the bed. The blows from the ax must have been delivered with fearful force, as the head of the bedstead occupied by the murdered man was broken down. The door to the little room where he slept was propped shut with a piece of board under the lock and against the floor. The assassin removed this in leaving the room, but made his exit from the building through the window where he gained entrance.

The first discovery was made about 9 o'clock Tuesday morning, the neighbors remarking that deceased was absent of his store would have been open. On peering through a side window they saw the bloody ax and the bedroom door open. W. I. Westerfield entered through the aperture made by the robber and found the pool of blood on the floor and the facts as above stated.
Coroner D. C. Narver, of this city was notified and arrived at Lafayette about 10:30 o'clock, and found the body still warm. A jury was impaneled and an inquest held. The jury had not finished their investigation last night, and adjourned to nine o'clock a. m., Monday. Many witnesses were examined but little of importance was learned from any of them save one—a man by the name of Marple, a sort of a roustabout and of rather unsavory reputation. In his testimony he admitted having been with deceased late the night before and knew a good deal concerning his business, frequently interpolating the remark, "But, gentlemen, I did not kill him; Eastman knows all about it." Eastman is Dr. Littlefield's hostler, and in his statement to the jury disclaimed any knowledge of the crime or criminal. A close examination of the window where the man entered disclosed the fact that the putty had been pried out with such a shaped knife as is contained in a so-called "cowboy's knife," the impression in the putty showing the shape distinctly; further, the knife blade had two small nicks in it near the point and these nicks left little ridges in the putty as the knife was drawn down the edge of the glass. Marple was asked for his knife and he gave it up readily. It was taken to the window and found to fit the impressions in the putty exactly, and two nicks in the point fitted the ridges on the putty. This evidence was afterward thrown out as it was proven that several parties had tampered with the window after the discovery—trying what impression the putty would take, etc. Blood was also found on his clothing, but this he claims he got on by carrying home a hog's head. The blood, however, will be subjected to a microscopic examination and its character easily determined. Experts could not be obtained yet to make an examination, and this was one reason for the adjournment as it is thought that by that time parties will be on hand to tell whether the blood is that of a human or otherwise. But farther than this, other developments are being traced up that, it is thought, will shift the blame from where it now seems to rest. It is to be earnestly hoped that the guilty party will speedily be brought to justice and on the gallows suffer the punishment justly deserved for one of the most awful deeds in the annals of crime.

Codlin Moth Preventive.

In our last issue we published an article on the ravages of the codlin moth amongst the apple trees in Oregon, in which it is stated that "there is no known remedy to exterminate the codlin moth." A correspondent writing to an exchange sends the following remedy, which should be cut out and saved by every apple grower in the county. It can be tested with very little labor and expense, every farmer having all the necessary machinery at hand.

"Hang a lighted lantern to a limb of the tree, set an apple box on end under the lantern, place a pail half full of water on top of the box and a spoonful of coal oil on the water. The lantern should hang just near enough to the water to clear it. Some have said that the codlin moth is not attracted by the light, but I think all the moth family are alike in their liking for a light. The first night I caught 200 moths with one light. The next night seventy. Then I waited two nights, and the next time I caught over 200. I believe that two lanterns in a ten acre orchard, lighted two nights in the week, will keep the orchard pretty clear of codlin moths. Every moth that touches the oil on the water is caught, and not more than a pint of oil is needed during the whole season. The work should be kept up during the whole season."

This is the last regular meeting of the old council. The new officers will be installed and enter upon the discharge of their duties on the first Tuesday in December.
NEEDS ATTENTION.—The North Yamhill bridge at Carlton is in a bad state of repair, and should be attended to at once. On the upper side the planks have spread in two places and left holes large enough for a horse to put a foot through. The center plank has also slipped to one side and left a hole running lengthwise of the bridge that is very liable to be the cause of a smashed buggy wheel. Fix 'er up, Mr. Supervisor; fix 'er up.

THANKSGIVING BALL.—The fire boys have decided to give a dance Thanksgiving eve. A committee of five was appointed to make arrangements for the same. And it was further voted that the proceeds of the dance be tendered the city for the purpose of raising the bell tower on Fireman's hall, and otherwise preparing it for the reception of the new fire bell now on its way here. This is a generous move, and should receive substantial aid.
THE RIGHT MAN.—Mart High has been engaged by Henderson Bros. as chief man of their livery stables, and will enter upon his duties on Tuesday next. Mart is one of the best drivers that ever handled the ribbons over any team, and is the right man in the right place. Henderson Bros. are to be congratulated upon securing the services of such a man, as he is sure to give satisfaction to everybody.

RAG TACKING.—Last Tuesday evening was a very pleasant one to Mr. and Mrs. J. has, Daniels. A small party of their neighbors gathered together and slipped in upon them holding a regular old fashioned sewing bee. They were taken completely by surprise, but it was nevertheless appreciated by them as well as a thoroughly enjoyed by those present.
SCABBY SHEEP.—Sheep inspector A. J. Nelson went over by Amity yesterday and took charge of 300 head of scabby sheep, belonging to a man by the name of Fryer from near Independence, Polk county. The are in a bad condition and Mr. Nelson says they will have to be thoroughly cured before he will allow them to be driven any further.

RETURNED.—Our old friend and fellow-townsmen Ed. Willis, stepped in among us Wednesday last, direct from Canada. Ed. has been absent several years and comes back looking as natural as you please. He was accompanied by his mother, brother and a cousin, Miss Cruze, who will probably remain in Oregon.

Mr. Harrison Booth and A. Pollard killed five bucks last Wednesday.

Capt. C. P. of the Daisy packing company made our burg a visit yesterday.

We have a new barber in our tonsorial department. The married men are having their mustaches dyed. Alsea Bill says look out boys.

Report from Little Nestucca says that Mr. Gage has built a very fine piggy to be run in connection with the shrimp cannery, the same power to run both enterprises.

We are expecting the steamer here about the first of the month, but from the sad looks on the faces of some of our young folks and deep drawn sigh we will be disappointed.

Times are dull at our burg since the fishermen have taken up their nets and quit fishing; although fish are plenty, there is no sale for them. Unruh & Buckler have about twenty tons of very fine chinook salmon, Mr. Victor Confas ten tons, the Compton boys about ten tons of salt and about two tons of dried salmon, awaiting transportation.

The male part of our burg went out on a hunting excursion for deer and bear, but game was scarce. H. B. struck a fresh No. 5 deer track that he followed for about three hours; it led him into a garden when he lost it among some squash vines. He said some curses words and returned to camp swearing that he would never go deer hunting on Three Rivers again.
